Legacy Project #09-429
Cerulean Warbler Occurrence Atlas for Military Installations
Final Report FY 2009

Introduction

The Cerulean Warbler (CERW, Dendroica cerulea) is a small wood-warbler that nests and forages in the upper canopy of mature forests. The breeding range falls entirely within the eastern US and Canada. Current information indicates that CERW are declining. The CERW is included on the USFWS 1995 Species of Management Concern list, the USFWS Birds of Conservation Concern 2008 list, and on Partners in Flight's 2004 Continental Watchlist; it is also listed in 16 states and 1 Canadian province.

The Cerulean Warbler Occurrence Atlas for military installations will evaluate the CERW status on all DoD lands with appropriate habitat that fall within the species' breeding range (plus a 100-mile buffer). This will allow DoD to manage proactively for CERW and to forge partnerships with state-level entities concerned with rare Neotropical migrants, such as Important Bird Areas programs and natural resource agencies. The long-term goal of all CERW management activities is to support the population and to prevent the federal listing of the CERW under the Endangered Species Act.

This project is entirely funded by the Department of Defense Legacy Resource Management Program.

Methods

GIS technology was used to determine the sites for this study. Habitat was initially evaluated at 1-mile resolution; sites that did not have habitat at this scale were evaluated at finer resolution: 38 sites were removed from the list due to lack of habitat. All sites considered are listed in Appendix 1. (Appendix 1 is simplified version of the Inventory, a separate Excel file.)

POCs were sought for the remaining 379 sites on the “potential” list. Each POC was sent a short questionnaire regarding habitat and bird survey work on site. A sample questionnaire is attached as Appendix 2. A project overview, a photo of the bird, and a sound clip were also provided. This range-wide “phone survey” was the main thrust of Year 1.

Questionnaires yielded three results: CERW present, CERW not present, or CERW status not known (ie, no bird survey work done). For locations with known populations of CERW, we requested abstracts of any studies done, along with the contact information for the primary researcher. These results were recorded in the “inventory” file.

Locations listed as “CERW status not known” need to be surveyed. Most of the survey work will occur in Years 2 and 3 of this project; 10 sites were surveyed in 2009 and are listed below in the “Results” section. Based on Year 1 results, an estimated 77 sites will need to be surveyed. Field staff spent a maximum of 8 hours per location to determine if CERW were present or absent. Fieldwork can only be done during the breeding season when male CERW are singing. We use local field staff when possible.

The field staff were instructed to focus their survey activities on CERW. The bird lists they developed were sent to the POC at each site. As a courtesy, the bird lists were also shared with active state breeding bird atlases (ie, Indiana). In Years 2 and 3, we will coordinate this sharing with the POC.

Difficulties

The largest problem encountered was the difficulty in obtaining POCs – 159 locations lack a POC. No protocols exist to alert 400+ installations that they will be contacted for a bird survey. Legacy staff asked the project staff to stop searching for POCs in July as these protocols were developed.

The GIS layer provided by Chris Eberly (Department of Defense Partners in Flight Program Coordinator) did not contain all of the DoD locations. Of the 14 additional locations discovered during the course of the project, 11 were USACE sites. More locations may be uncovered in Year 2.

The response rate was good: Of 191 questionnaires sent out, only 53 (or 28%) have not yet been returned. A second request was made to these locations in June or July, which yielded some results. These locations will need to be contacted again during Year 2.

Results

The following table summarizes the results from the questionnaires. The “other status” category covers sites with no habitat, sites that have been decommissioned and sold, and sites that have merged with other installations. The final row contains sites without POCs. For detailed results, refer to Appendix 1.

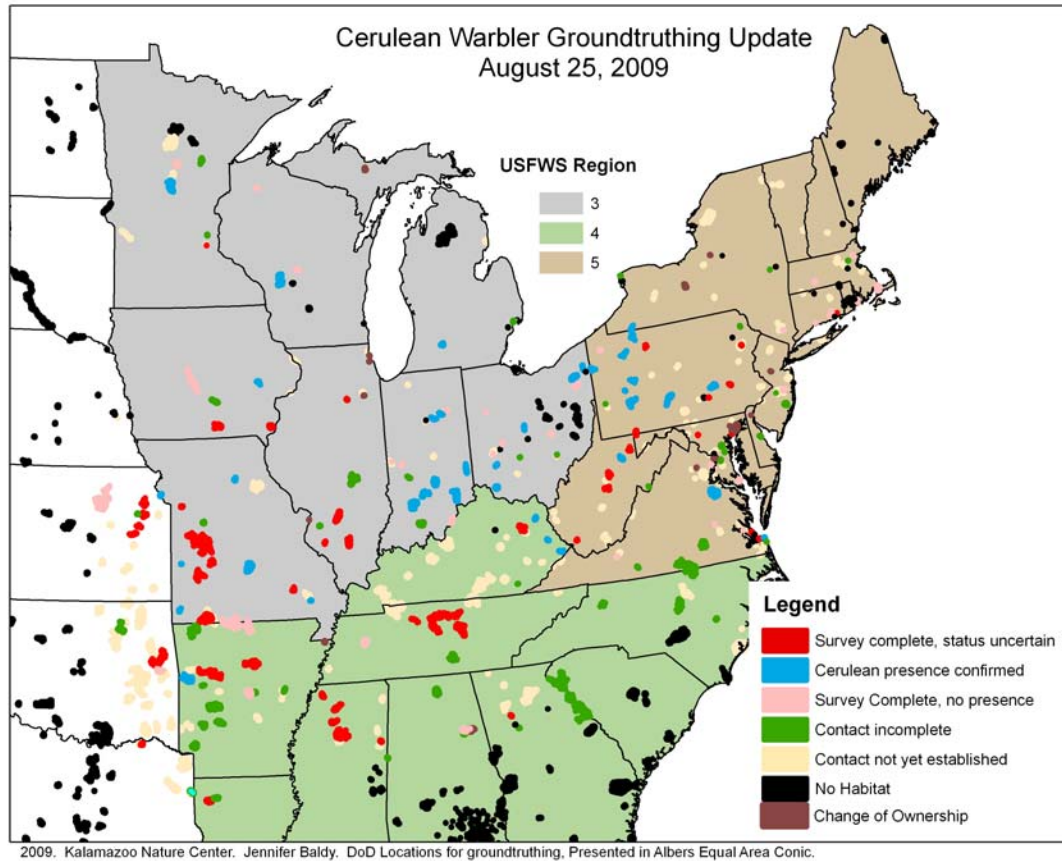

CERW Status	All DoD	AF	Army	Marines	Navy	USACE	Other
CERW present	44	0	18	0	1	25	0
CERW not present	38	4	17	0	3	13	1
Unknown	52	5	11	0	2	33	1
Other	71	12	35	2	8	12	2
No response	53	13	12	0	1	27	0
No POC	159	6	48	5	26	72	2
TOTAL	417	40	141	7	41	182	6

Of all sites at this point, 11% have CERW present, 9% do not have CERW, and 12% are uncertain of CERW presence. Another 51% (212 sites) have no CERW status (either no response or no POC). Assuming that 12% of the “no status” sites report “CERW status unknown”, an estimated 77 sites need to be surveyed in Years 2 and 3.

Ten sites were surveyed in 2009: 4 in Indiana, 1 in Minnesota, 4 in Ohio, and 1 in Wisconsin. CERW presence was confirmed at one site. However, breeding bird atlas staff discovered CERW at a site in Indiana subsequent to our survey. This is a benefit of sharing bird survey results with Atlas coordinators.

Site	Branch	State	CERW present?
Alum Creek Lake	USACE	Ohio	yes
Brookville Lake	USACE	Indiana	yes (atlas survey)
Camp Wismer Training Site	Army NG	Wisconsin	no
Cecil M Harden Lake	USACE	Indiana	no
Crosslake / Pine River Reservoir	USACE	Minnesota	no
Dillon Lake	USACE	Ohio	no
Indiana Army Ammunition Plant	Army	Indiana	no
JE Roush Lake / Huntington Lake	USACE	Indiana	no
JSMC – Lima	Army	Ohio	no
Wright-Patterson Air Force Base	Air Force	Ohio	no

These results are displayed on the map below. “CERW present” is marked in blue, “CERW not present” is marked in pink, and “CERW status unknown” is marked in red. In the Inventory, sites surveyed this year are marked in rose while sites with the status “other” (no habitat, no longer DoD property, etc.) are marked in gray.

Recommendations

No range-wide management recommendations can be made at this time, as there is no CERW status for 51% of the military installations. Since the Army and the Corps of Engineers have the most installations within the CERW's breeding range, together accounting for over 75% of the sites in this study, any management recommendations will primarily affect these two branches.

Cerulean Warblers are present on installations within their core breeding range, centered on the mountains of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The picture will become more interesting as results from the edge of the range are filled in.

We are excited to continue this project in 2010.

Appendix 2:

Cerulean Warbler Survey Questionnaire

1. Does your site have mature forest? (> 50 feet high, > 50% canopy coverage)
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, how many contiguous acres? (If your site has multiple parcels, please list each parcel separately.)

2. Have bird surveys been done at your site within the past 5 years? (This can include surveys by your own staff, Audubon groups, or contracted researchers.)
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, have they been during the breeding season? (See dates below.)
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, have Cerulean Warblers been documented?
☐ Yes ☐ No

3. Have contracted researchers conducted Cerulean Warbler-specific studies?
☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, please include the "Abstract" paragraph from the completed study or a one paragraph synopsis of the study along with the contact information for the lead researcher.

4. If we need to access your site to survey for Cerulean Warblers who should we contact to get permission?
